

Character: Fagin

The book Oliver Twist, written by Charles Dickens, is about a young boy named Oliver, a poor little child, who is an orphan and has a lot of adventures in his life. In London, Fagin and his pickpocket gang are one of his adventures. Fagin is an old, ugly looking man with red hair and wears an old black coat. He is, as told, boss of a thief club, which exists of young boys and girls. Eventually he wants Oliver to work for him and to steal money from people in London. But first he is very friendly to him and is the only one who helps him when Oliver is broken and sad. Fagin pretended to be Oliver's friend instead he brainwashed and manipulated him just for Oliver to trust him. Indeed, Fagin is meant to inspire nightmares in child and adult readers. The main task he gives to his people is to steal pockets or valuable things and if they don't follow his commands, he uses force. At the end he finally got caught and was hung for his crimes he had done.

Mert: The first time Oliver met Fagin. He was shocked one more kid came to the gang. He got locked up in a room.

Ksenia: When Fagin found out that Oliver couldn't finish his command, he was extremely upset and aggressive. Oliver got beaten by him and got locked up in a dark room.
