

Character: Mr. Brownlow

Mr. Brownlow is an old, kind-hearted, rich-looking gentleman, who got robbed by the Artful Dodger, when he was looking at the books at the bookshop. He is the only one, beside Oliver and the Artful Dodger, who knows that Oliver isn't the thief who stole Mr. Brownlow's wallet. Afterward's he saved Oliver of getting into prison. And he took the innocent boy, who looked as white as death, to his house and let him get healthy again. With this action he saved him from starving and dying.

When Oliver felt better, Mr. Brownlow gave him new clothes and some shoes. He asked him, if he could go to the bookseller. A few moments later Oliver walked out of Mr. Brownlow's house with some books and money. But on his way, he got kidnapped by the Artful Dodger and his friends.

After a long time of looking for Oliver, without success, he moved to West Indies. After a few weeks he returned to London and helped to find out the truth about Oliver. At the end Mr. Brownlow and Oliver moved to a quiet country village and lived happily.
